

CHIEF JUSTICE WHITE AT RETIREMENT AGE AND MAY SOON RETIRE

WHAT'S WHAT IN MALE SEX'S FURNISHINGS

Neckties Are Light and Wider, and Caps Are Favorites.

It seems that haberdashery runs about the same season after season. The male sex, when it goes in real style, concentrates upon suits and overcoats, leaving the shirts, collar, neckties and other necessary adjuncts to fate or the haberdashers' men, which amounts to about the same in the long run.

Notwithstanding these facts, which are presented for the benefit of the reader who desires to be in style and at the same time have a strange hold on the theoretical limitations which underlie the great basic groundwork of the selection of his heart's desire, the present season shows some new Caps, for instance, are going to have a big season. Not only are they being worn more than ever, but they are big in circumference and growing big in price. Last year, a cap might cost $1.50. This year, it may cost $2.50. The cap is the favorite headgear of young men and other "wise ones." It will be pleasing to the cap's devotees to see them adorning so many heads this season. Golfing and motoring are two sports which are in part responsible for the vogue of the cap. The head covering will come in various mixtures. In fact, a man can get about what he wants in the cap line this fall.

Scarfs in Distinctive Colors.
Neckties—scarfs, you know—are unusually distinctive in color and wider than in years. They are to be tied in puff above the vest. Stripes, bars, checkerboard effects, fancy patterns—a wide latitude is given in the fastidious male to roam in the pasture of neckties. It is all a question of the man's taste. Knit ties, which have been drug on the counter for the last few seasons, may return in their pastime glory, dealers aver. But the wide ties have the "bulge," both figuratively and literally, to set.

Soft cuffs—a la Français—are still the favorites. As for the shirts themselves, many striking patterns are being shown in the local stores. As in all other articles for men's wear, it is entirely up to the man himself what to buy, the styles change so little season after season.

A novelty in walking gloves introduces a new idea in embroidery—miniature facsimiles of sticks traced on the backs, similar to the golf gloves on which designs of clubs are outlined.

Sweater coats are not enjoying the vogue here this season they have had in the past, it is understood from dealers, although a large and varied assortment of them is being shown, and they will still be favorites with the young people. Macramés will be in great demand, the coats of the better make, especially, in which many distinctive patterns are on display.

NEW DEPARTMENT AT NORMAL SCHOOL

sent out from among the faculty and teachers of the normal into the smaller towns and rural districts of the county to give a series of entertainments. This work is done free of

The normal school at the present time has perhaps the largest enrollment for the fall term ever recorded in its history. The total enrollment up to date is 313 of which forty-two are enrolled in the classes of the extended program.

President Joseph Rosier of the Fairmont normal went Thursday to Keyser to address the Mineral county educational rally, which was held in that city. This was a rally of all of the schools of Mineral county and a big time was had. Friday and Saturday Mr. Rosier attended the Potomac valley round table and delivered an address and next week will attend the Monongahela valley round table, being scheduled to address this organization also. Last week Mr. Rosier addressed the Ohio valley round table at Wheeling.

Last week seven members of the normal faculty were requisitioned for work at various educational meetings in different parts of the county and state and this week several more are doing this character of work.

Crazed Giant Bites Victim's Suspenders

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Nov. 6.—William Dunn, aged 55, and a giant in stature, residing in the Bunker Hill section of this city, came from his cabin the other morning, a raving maniac.

Dunn carried a butcher knife and a whetstone and meeting Tom Wier told Wier he was going to kill some one at once and asked him to whet his knife. Dunn went into Lindberg's store, where five men tried to hold him. Dunn was so ferocious he chewed the suspenders off one man.
